TechSource Welcomes New Board Member

Los Alamos, NM—Techsource, Inc., a multidisciplinary science and engineering company, is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Steve Henry to its Board of Directors.

Mr. Henry is an accomplished leader with more than 40 years of experience in nuclear matters, stockpile stewardship, and weapon effectiveness. He is also noted for his extensive work with highly specialized, intelligence laboratory testing units. Prior to joining TechSource, Mr. Henry served as the Director of Global Security at the Nevada National Security Site (NNSS) managing and executing the nonproliferation, counter-proliferation, counter-terrorism, nuclear emergency response, cyber warfare, and intelligence community programs. Prior to NNSS, Mr. Henry held leadership positions at the Department of Defense (DoD) including Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Nuclear Matters from 2003-2012. Mr. Henry laid the foundation for his distinguished civil service career by serving over 21 years in the U.S. Army as a Field Artillery and a Nuclear Operations/Research and Development Officer.

TechSource CEO V. Brian D’Andrea shared his confidence that Mr. Henry’s appointment will enhance TechSource’s nuclear matters expertise and further expand the company’s reach within the DoD and the intelligence communities. “We are pleased to welcome Mr. Henry to TechSource’s Board of Directors. Mr. Henry’s extensive experience in the nuclear matters arena along with his work with highly specialized intelligence technology testing units solidifies TechSource’s commitment to provide our customers a comprehensive view of all nuclear matters and access to unique expertise available nowhere else. Mr. Henry’s expertise effectively addresses the entire nuclear matters system from threat, policy, program to operational unit and test bench.”
