Albuquerque Journal Recognizes TechSource as a New Mexico Top Workplace for Second Year in a Row

Los Alamos, NM. Los Alamos, NM. TechSource, Inc., a leading scientific and engineering consultancy, is pleased to announce that it has for been named a 2022 New Mexico Top Workplace. This is the second year in a row that the Albuquerque Journal has recognized TechSource based on employee feedback gleaned from TechSource's best assets, its employees.

The Top Workplaces program starts with capturing employee feedback on what matters most about a workplace culture. Energage LLC's Workplace Survey measures 15 culture drivers organized into four themes or "imperatives". Scoring well on these statements indicates a healthy organization, which means more engaged employees and better business results. Out of 17 million employees across 50,000 organizations to participate in the survey, TechSource achieved Top Workplace recognition.

"This recognition is truly an honor as it is a testament to our employees' collective voice. I could not be prouder of our exceptional cohort and appreciate their belief in the company," states Jeff Giangliuli, TechSource's President and COO. "At TechSource, we are committed to cultivating an inclusive employee focused environment that supports personal and professional growth. Our ability to retain and attract talent is what truly makes us an employer of choice."

According to Barry Shulock, TechSource's Vice President, General Counsel, and HR Director, "When employees feel appreciated, believe in leadership, and are aligned with where the company is headed, as evidenced by this wonderful feedback and recognition, it is no coincidence that TechSource has achieved record growth and revenue. We know that there is a direct correlation between employee engagement and revenue growth. Appreciating employees and providing an inclusive and customer-focused work culture is sound business and the basis of our success."
